Marymound – Finding the Good

In 1911, the Sisters of Our Lady of Charity of the Good Shepherd assumed ownership of the former Hagel House and, with it, the surrounding grounds. The Sisters converted the house into a cloister that was named the St. Agnes Priory and provided care for "needy and unprotected" girls, which also included basic academic instruction. As the demand for services grew, the charitable Order built the original school in 1925.

In 1950, Marymound School was created from a formal separation between the social service and educational functions of the Order. This arrangement lasted for 19 years, at which time the two entities were reunited as Marymound. In 1958, a second school building and a swimming pool were constructed on the site, while Hagel House became and remains today the residence of the Sisters.

By 2006, Marymound has evolved into a diverse social agency serving in excess of 1,200 young persons and their families annually. The agency provides 24-hour residential care, a crisis stabilization unit, community group homes, and treatment foster care on the Scotia campus. As well, the agency delivers community-based sexual abuse treatment services and school-based youth emergency education services throughout the City of Winnipeg. Further, the two school buildings provide much needed space and facilities for the delivery of provincial curriculum co-educational classes that start at the elementary level and go through to senior high. The agency now also has facilities in Thompson, Manitoba, where similar programming is delivered under the auspices of Marymound North.
