Overview of Report Elements

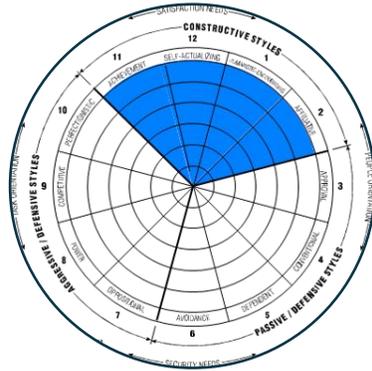

The Human Synergistics Circumplex and the Style Clusters

The Circumplex

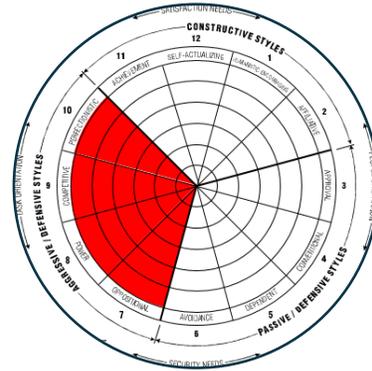

- Brings together 12 styles of thinking, behaving and interacting
- Grouped in clusters: constructive, passive-defensive and aggressive-defensive
- Arranged styles in a circular graph based on their relationship to each other

Style Clusters AKA How Cultures are Described

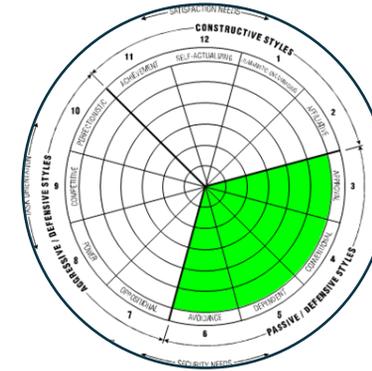

Constructive Styles

- Encourage the attainment of organizational goals through people development, promote teamwork and synergy, and enhance individual, group, and organizational adaptability and effectiveness

Aggressive/Defensive Styles

- Lead people to focus on their own needs at the expense of those of their group and organization and lead to stress, turnover, and inconsistent performance

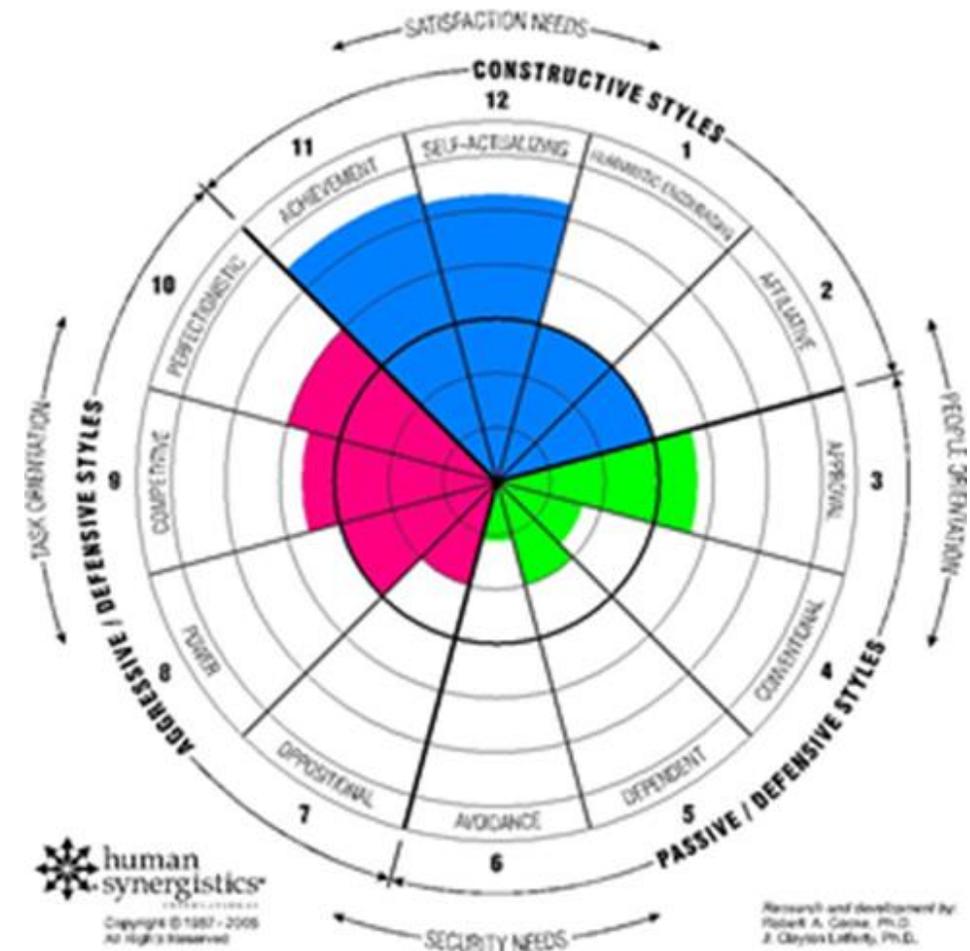

Passive/Defensive Styles

- Lead people to subordinate themselves to the organization, stifle creativity and initiative, and allow the organization to stagnate

How to read the Circumplex

- The length of the extension in each section reflects the strength of that style in terms of percentile scores (see example here)
- Ability to see how individual, group or organizational results compare with approx. 1000 other organizations that used the tool

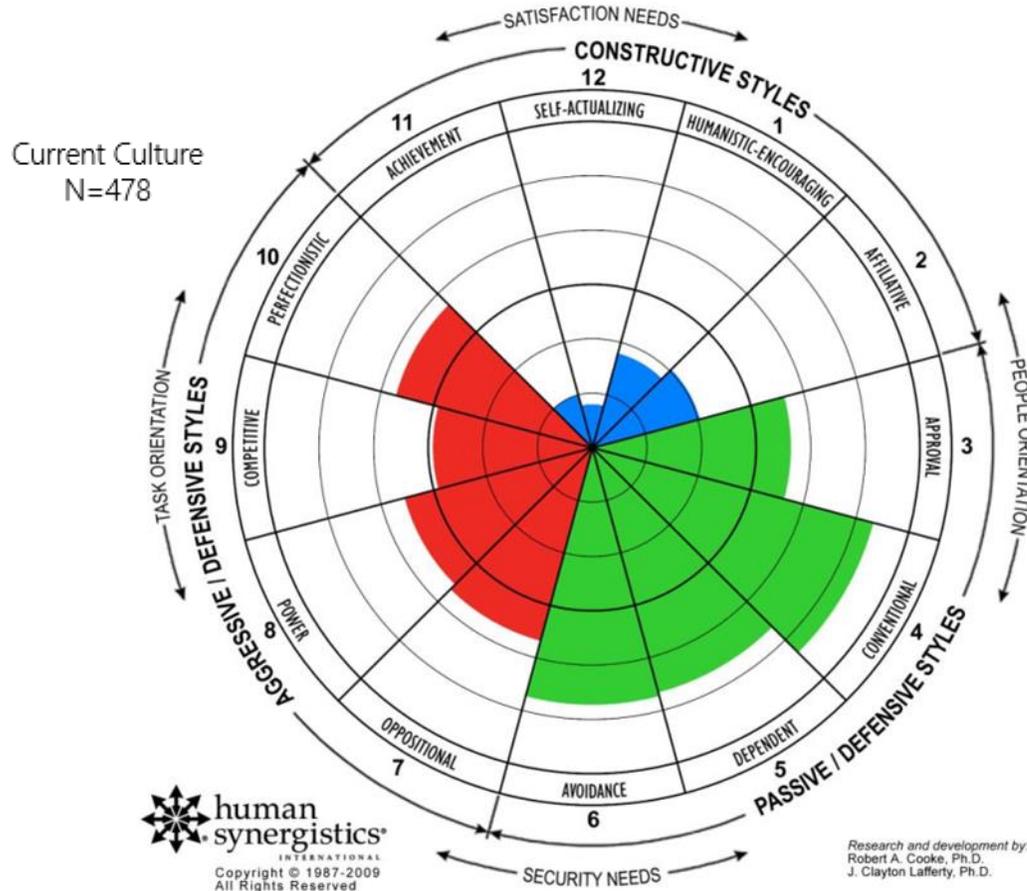

WFPS Results – Overall Organization

WFPS Context

- The OCI – Current and OCI – Ideal surveys were administered to WFPS employees in February 2021
 - 478 employees participated in the OCI – Current
 - 42 employees participated in the OCI – Ideal

Current Culture = Passive / Defensive

In general, this type of culture involves expectations for members to interact with other people in cautious and tentative ways to protect their own security.

The current culture is further described as being:

Conventional

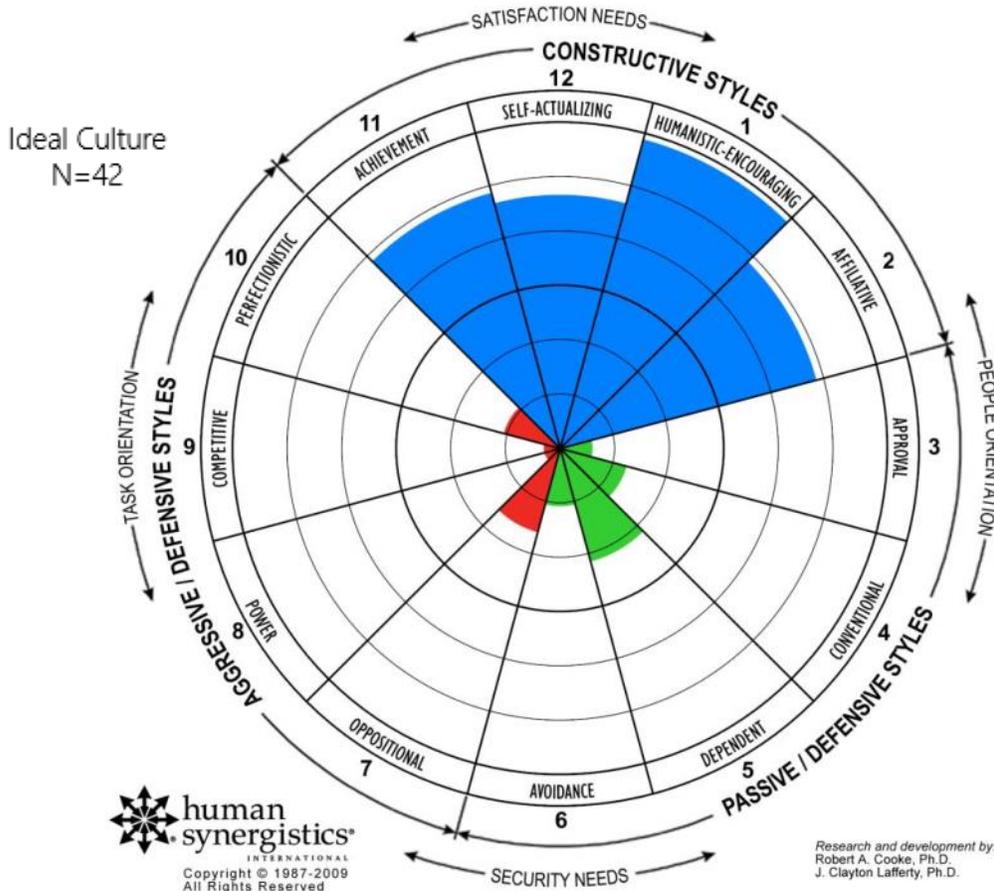

- involves expectations for conforming, following the rules and making a good impression (see Appendix, page 29 for additional description)

Avoidance

- involves expectations for being non-committal, never being blamed for mistakes and staying out of trouble (see Appendix page 30 for additional description)

Ideal Culture = Constructive

In general, this type of culture involves expectations for members to interact with people and approach tasks in ways that will help them to meet their higher-order needs for satisfaction and growth

The ideal culture is further described as being:

Humanistic- Encouraging

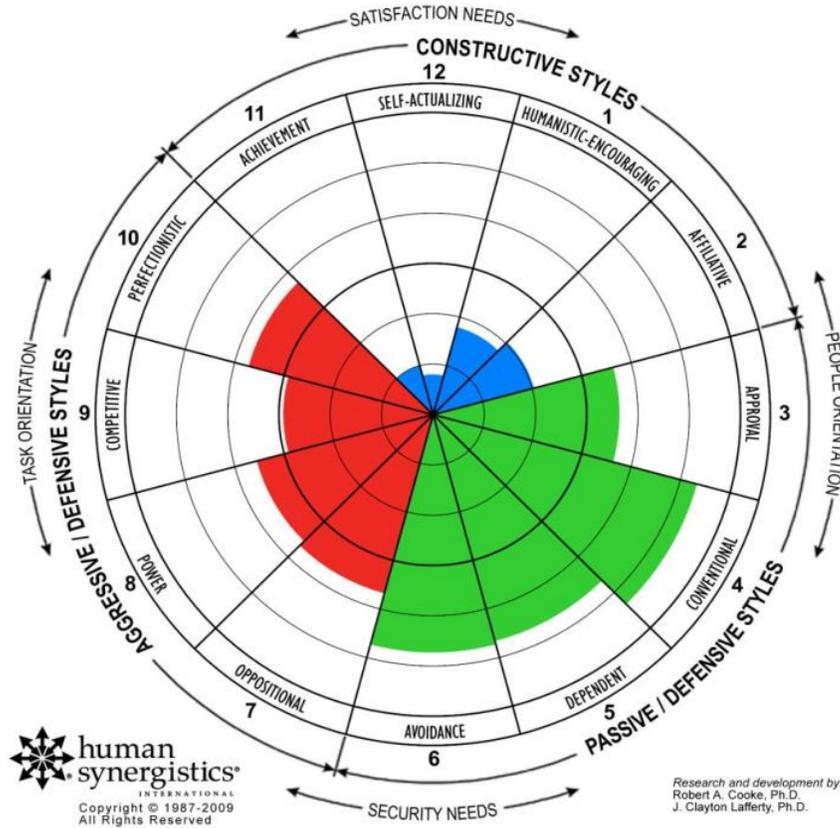

- involves expectations for being supportive, constructive, and open to influence when dealing with one another (see Appendix, page 36 for additional description)

Affiliative

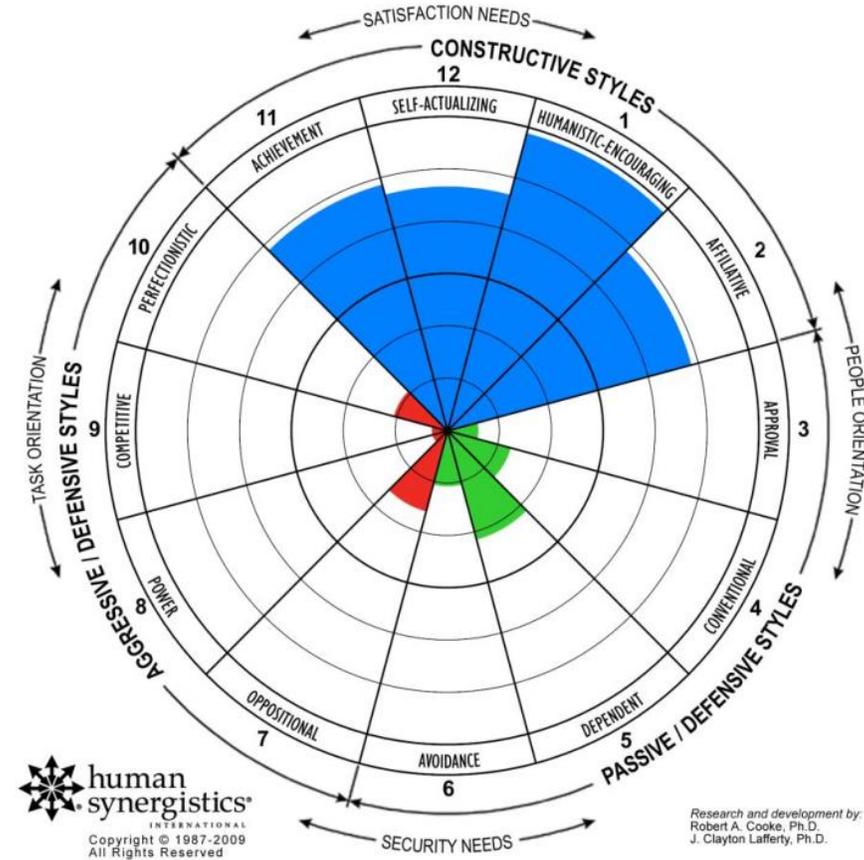

- involves expectations for being friendly, open, cooperative and sensitive to the needs of the work group (see Appendix, page 36 for additional description)

Most Prominent Behaviours – Current Culture

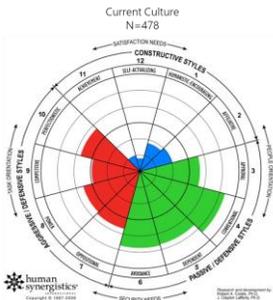

I.e., The results suggest that these are among the strongest behaviours in the organization.

Conventional Behaviours

- accept the status quo
- not "rock the boat"
- fit into the "mold"
- avoid confrontations
- tell people different things to avoid conflict
- treat rules as more important than ideas
- conform
- cast aside solutions that seem different or risky
- make a "good impression"
- always follow policies and practices

Avoidance Behaviours

- "lay low" when things get tough
- never be the one blamed for problems
- make "popular" rather than necessary decisions
- put things off
- not get involved
- wait for others to act first
- be non-committal
- push decisions upward
- shift responsibilities to others
- take few chances

Most Desired Behaviours – Ideal Culture

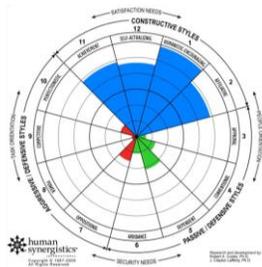

I.e., The identified ideal suggests these are among the most desired behaviours to move toward.

Affiliative

- share feelings and thoughts
- treat people as more important than things
- be open, warm
- use good human relations skills
- show concern for people
- be tactful
- motivate others with friendliness
- think in terms of the group's satisfaction
- cooperate with others
- deal with others in a friendly, pleasant way

Humanistic-Encouraging

- help others think for themselves
- resolve conflicts constructively
- encourage others
- take time with people
- help others to grow and develop
- be supportive of others
- involve others in decisions affecting them
- give positive rewards to others
- be a good listener
- show concern for the needs of others
